Where can muskrats be found in Virginia?

This is a question which has been asked the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce by the Fredricksburg Chamber of Commerce. The inquirer states that he desires to start a muskrat farm in Virginia and has more than $50,000 to invest in the project.

Delightful Trip

Colonel Howard J. Benchoff, president of Shenandoah Valley, Inc., has announced that June 19 has been set as the date on which his organization will send a special train of boosters to California next year. The trip will last until July 19 and will cover California, several national parks, Colonel Benchoff is naming committees for the trip now.

"We will cover California, several national parks, Oregon, Washington, Vancouver and Alaska, returning by way of Lake Louise and the Canadian Rockies," Colonel Benchoff said in advices to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

"The party will be made up of Virginians in general, rather than men from any one section of the state. In fact we have received inquiries indicating that people from other points would like to go along."

The Shenandoah Valley this year sent special booster trains to Florida, Canada and the New England States.

Auto Tax and License

With a design of equalizing the tax burden and of placing the assessment where it most properly belongs, Virginia, following the method employed by thirty-five other states, has changed the tax on automobiles from a basis of horse-power to one of weight.

Under this method a tax of 70 cents is levied on each one hundred pounds, or major fraction thereof, of the factory weight of the car, all of the proceeds of which tax goes to roads This will result in a reduction for certain lighter cars.

The increased revenue from this source will be used to make up in part for the repeal of the mill tax on land and tangible personal property, effective in 1927, and should result in substantial direct reductions to owners of this class of property.

If the land owner pays more by reason of this equalization of the auto license tax, he should more than make this up by the abolition of the land tax The tax is also regarded as equitable from the standpoint of the fact that the heavier the car the more damage is done the road, which makes it but just that the tax on the heavier car should be itself heavier.

This year the cost of issuing auto license locally will be paid by the state. Heretofore this expense has been borne by the individual motorist.

Student-Operated Bank Makes Record

Lynn, Mass.—Students in the Lynn English high school run their own savings bank and combine, to practical advantage, study and thrift. The bank is said to hold the records for deposits in such an institution in a single day—$3,150—received one Monday morning. The school has 1,400 students.

The Lynn system of a student operated school bank has been tested by 22 years' successful service. It has been copied in 14 states and two foreign countries.

Regular banking rooms are maintained. Students, themselves, fill the various positions, receive the deposits and keep the accounts. The school savings plan has spread in one form or another to all the public schools of the city above the third grade. In that time the students have saved more than $200,000.

County Agent's Notes

Mash for Egg Production

A mash composed of certain ground grains and some form of animal protein is an essential part of a ration for both growing chickens and laying hens. The reason is that birds putting on growth or producing eggs cannot assimilate enough nutriment from whole or cracked grains to supply max.mum need.

When the grain is ground, little work is required of the gizzard, and much more of the feed can be used in making flesh or eggs.

The scratch part of the ration, however, is needed to give the gizzard some thing to do in order to keep the birds in a healthy condition

For laying hens the scratch grain should be thrown in some litter, which provides an incentive to needed exercise.

It was once thought that a mash should be fed wet to produce best results, but experiments have proved that in spite of the slightly better palibility of the wet feed, the convenience of feeding it dry overbalances any slight gain in production. Feeding it dry is now the usual method, and digestibility is not increased by wetting.

The objection to wet mash is that it requires too much labor; it must be moistened, then carried to the hens once a day, and the troughs must be cleaned after each feeding. Cleanliness is absolutely essential, because indigestion and diarrhea will result from feeding in dirty troughs. On the other hand, a dry mash hopper may be filled once a day or once a week, even less frequently, and needs no further attention. Hens do not ever eat dry mash as they some times do of wet feed.

AN IDEAL MASH FOR APPOMATTOX COUNTY

Best feed from hopper or self feeder, and kept before the hens all the time.

50 lbs. wheat shorts or middlings.
50 lbs. wheat bran.
50 lbs. corn meal.
25 lbs. meat meal.
1½ lbs. salt.

AN IDEAL SCRATCH FEED

To be fed twice a day in deep litter, lightly in the morning, heavier at night.
1 bu. wheat
1 bu. cracked corn.

The above is a good home mixed mash, however, unless you are willing to go by directions, and mix it thoroughly, I would advise you to buy it already mixed.

Plenty of clean fresh water should be provided in clean vessels.

Buttermilk, as much as possible to be fed all the time.

Clear days about noon, give the fowls free range on anything green, such as wheat, rye, rape or alfalfa. At no time should they be turned out on snow and ice.
R. B. HUDGINS,
County Agent

RAILWAY STATION IS CARRIED OFF

Handsome Structure in Florida Razed by Negroes.

Jacksonville, Fla.—A complete railway station was carried off at Magnolia Springs, near here, recently.

The station, a large and handsome building, erected as an addition to the Magnolia Springs hotel, which burned down recently, was missing when W. G. Spikes, the owner, went to ascertain if it needed repairs.

First appearances denoted that the station had been burned down but further investigation showed it had been razed and the material carted off.

Subsequently, Francis Richards, negro, was found with ten wagonloads of lumber in his yard. Another negro had a similar amount. They said a man who gave the name of McConnell, leased orders for the station to be razed. He told them they might have the lumber for their trouble.

Since McConnell represented himself as an employee of the Atlantic Coast line and said he had been ordered by officials of the railroad to raze the building, the negroes proceeded openly with their destructive work, they said.

The Atlantic Coast line officials declare they have no such man in their employ, and have assigned detectives to hunt McConnell.

The missing building was 46 by 25 feet with wings and had many valuable decorative features.

At Last Smokes Cigar Given Him 63 Years Ago

Greenville, Ohio. — T. J. Burns smoked his first cigar on his seventy-seventh birthday.

And as he smoked, memory pictured for him in the fragrant blue haze a scene in a little cross-roads store at Gettysburg, on his fourteenth birthday, when the proprietor presented him with a "ten-center."

In those days, a "ten-center" was considered quite a cigar. Burns decided to keep it "until after supper." After supper he decided to save it until he was older and better able to appreciate it.

And the longer he saved it, the more attached to it he became. He lavished every kindness on it. He wrapped it carefully in cotton, and moistened it now and then to keep it from cracking.

He decided at last to smoke the cigar which had furnished him so much satisfactory cheer during sixty-three years.

"I was afraid I might not be here to smoke it next year," he said. "Oh, yes, I been smokin' all my life, but this was my first cigar. Might good one, too."

Uncle Sam Preserves Indians' Burial Ground

Yakima, Wash.—Melmelose island in the Columbia river, burial ground for western Indians for uncounted generations and particularly sacred to the Yakimas, has been set aside by the government as a red man's city of the dead.

Since the days when thousands of Indians from western plains and mountains made annual pilgrimages to the fishing grounds of The Dalles and the "tum-water" of the Columbia, bringing their dead with them, the island has been a holy ground for the aborigines. Formerly it was covered with large "dead houses," built of cedar, on the shelves of which reposed the mummified bodies of the red men.

Sinew-wrapped bows and stone-tipped arrows were deposited with some of the older remains, and more modern weapons with some of the more recent.

Device Trains Shell Directly on Plane

San Pedro, Calif.—A new fire-control instrument for the speation of antiaircraft guns, recently perfected by the Navy department, has proved "highly satisfactory" in its first service tests made aboard the U. S. S. Maryland, naval experts revealed.

The device, which transmits electrically all firing data to the antiaircraft batteries, is said to direct shell-fire with such accuracy that antiaircraft gunners can anticipate the path of a flying plane and by merely setting the fuse of an explosive shell can fire so the shell and plane will meet at a previously calculated point. The instrument, described as having 40,000 working parts, is so designed that since the altitude of the plane is determined, the only action required is for one observer to follow the target's elevation and another its direction. This is done through telescopes mounted on the instrument.

Holds $30 Bill Issued in 1778; Legal Tender

New Britain, Conn.—A bona fide $30 bill is held by Bernard L. Steppe of this city. Local banking houses pronounce it authentic, and Steppe has refused many times its face value.

The note, dated September 26, 1778, and signed by "A. Lawrence, Secretary of the United States Treasury," is numbered 217,305. It is about one-fourth the size of a modern dollar bill. Bankers say it is still legal tender.

TURKISH PROGRESS IS BLOW TO CZECHS

Abolition of Fez Hits Important Industry.

Washington.—When news reached the world that Turkey had abolished the fez it created mild interest.

That is, the interest was mild in nearly all the world except in a little Czechoslovakian village in the Bohmer Wald, where it stirred up amazement. Instead. Now the people of Strakonitz have protested against Turkey's abandonment of its traditional headgear because it cripples their industry of supplying fezzes to Turkey.

"The predicament of Strakonitz (the Czechs spell it Strakonice) affords a telling cross-section of Czechoslovakian industry," says a bulletin from the headquarters of the National Geographic society in Washington.

"Long before Czechoslovakia became an independent state it had the habit of making things for other nations. When the buying power of Europe shrank after the war, Czechoslovakians were forced afar for markets as they never were before. The 'Yankees of Europe,' as they have been called, have been doing business with the 'Yankees' of America. When Turkey an id not familiar with Czechoslovakian glass beads from Gablonz, with Czech embroidery and Bohemian glassware?

"Strakonitz, Gablonz, Kladno, Prtkram, Brunn and other manufacturing towns are in the western end of the country. Czechoslovakia, at first, seemed an awkwardly long state. But it helps one remember the geography of the nation. Czech is a short, compact name, and likewise the western, or Czech, or Bohemian section, is as compact as a box. Slovakia stretches out on the tongue and geographically tapers out along the Carpathian range like a scarf trailing behind the Bohemian box.

"The edges of the box are mountain ranges and Strakonitz lies near the south wall. Another way of saying its position is to say that Strakonitz lies half way between Ceske Budejovice and Plzen. A still better way is to say that it lies half way between Budweis and Pilsen, for the German spellings of those towns are far more familiar to an American than the Czech spellings.

Velstead Act Grieved Pilsen.

"The sorrow caused Strakonitz by the Turkish edict against the fez is a drop in the bucket beside the grief Pilsen faced because of the United States' declaration of prohibition. Pilsen's municipal brewery is the largest in Czechoslovakia and one of the largest in the world. Its product goes to nearly every land. This brewery is a community project operated by a few hundred house owners of the town.

"While the textile industries, including the hat making of the Strakonitz district, are extensive, even a slight inquiry into the Czechoslovakian trade reveals that Bohemia is especially dedicated to beverages. First there is Hana (Prussatin) in Moravia between Bohemia and Slovakia, famous for its barley malt, which is shipped all over the world. Then there is Saaz (Zatec) in the far west of Bohemia, famous for its hops which are shipped to Pilsen and to Germany. There also are the numerous breweries. And finally there is the extensive glass industry centered in Gablonz (Jablonec) for fancy ware and Teplitz (Teplice), Prague (Praha), etc., for plainer ware.

"Pilsen, Strakonitz and Budweis are also within the chief health springs district of southern Bohemia, one of the most famous of Europe. In past ages the country was liberally sprinkled with small volcanic peaks. Volcanic activity has survived only in the warm health springs, such as Karlovy Vary, better known as Karlsbad, and Mar Lazne, better known as Marienbad."
